Hello and Welcome,

We hope you enjoy this new edition of Toowoomba Food! This edition sees an expansion of readership, with this incredible local dining directory now being delivered to (almost) every house and hotel in Toowoomba, so it's even easier to get hold of. Be sure to keep it next to your phone, put it on the fridge - wherever will be handy to grab whenever you're wondering what to eat!

For those who haven't seen us before, we're a young couple (with backgrounds in design and marketing), now dedicated to dining publishing - making the local dining and entertainment scene easily accessible to everyone.

Dining directories and publications have been available in larger centres for years, and knowing the exceptional hospitality scene available in Toowoomba, we thought it was high time our city had access to the same! Being locals we know what our town can offer and the best way to tell everyone else about it. We have so much to be proud of in Toowoomba - so many local farms providing the best quality produce, local wineries, fantastic weather and of course - incredible, friendly people - many of whom you will meet in your dining experiences.

Online you can of course find extensive information and photos from a huge range of local venues - cafes, takeaways, restaurants, delis, pubs, caterers and function houses - as well as their menus! You can find out what's going on in town with information about gigs and events to complement your dining experiences, or check out the Specials Board to grab yourself a deal.

Our Toowoomba Food publication offers everyone easy access to the dining scene, if you can't get online or just want an enjoyable, mouth-watering light read! (If you can get online, be sure to sign up for our monthly Toowoomba Food e-Newsletter, where you have the chance to win a dining voucher every issue just by being signed up).

Remember, if you hear the words "what's for lunch?", "where should we go for dinner?", head to OnlineDining.com.au or grab your Toowoomba Food, where all your dining questions can be answered, and your dining desires come to life!

Happy Eating!

HEALTHY DINING OUT

Watching your waistline or looking after your health? Dining out doesn't have to be a social event of over-indulgence ... it can be easier (and usually tastier!) than cooking healthily for yourself at home - if you know how.

Restaurant kitchens are brimming with delightful fresh ingredients, the chefs are trained in many cooking styles and the menus offer incredible variety. If asked, venues will usually be only too happy to modify meals slightly to cater for you - so by making a few simple choices, you can enjoy your meal out guilt-free.

1. Quality not Quantity

If you usually eat a one-course meal at home, don't feel obliged to eat 2 or 3 courses dining out - it's tempting when reading what the menu offers, but do you really need it all in the one sitting? Choose just a main, or choose an entree and dessert - you can come back to try something else the next day or the next week!

2. Meat or Seafood

Often considered the heart of the meal, you can easily choose the healthy option. Avoid the fattier cuts of meat, or choose chicken or seafood. Fish has minimal fat content (and is great brain food!)

3. On the Side

Forget the chips, ask for salad or veggies instead!

4. What's on Top?

Always ask for sauces and dressings on the side so you can control the amount and use only what you need. Opt for vinaigrettes, lemon or mustard based dressings, or a healthy salsa.

5. It's the Style

How is it cooked? Obviously fried food is a no-no if you're watching your health, so go for the poached, grilled, steamed or baked options.

6. Tempting Desserts

If you have a sweet tooth and can't resist, choose the fruit options - but forget the cream and custard. Or make the most of a romantic dinner, indulge and go halves with your beloved!

7. Drinks

Alcohol is a dieters' worst friend. It's tempting to have a glass of wine with dinner, but packed with calories it's best to choose water or fresh juice. Ask for skim milk in your coffee or try a herbal tea.

PASTA

Commonly considered truly Italian fare, pasta has been a staple part of diets around the world for centuries... so how do you find the perfect balance?

Primarily made with flour and eggs, pasta is an excellent source of carbs (which are the most common provider of energy). In recent times and with the increase in dieting and new nutritional theories, many believe carbs are fattening and non-essential, as energy can also be sourced from fats and proteins. The widely known Atkins Diet promotes a low-carb diet and teaches that most fats are over-rated and a nutritional problem; telling us carbs contribute more to weight problems than fats.

But is pasta really the "bad guy" it is now commonly made out to be? A typical serving of pasta (1 cup) contains less than a gram of fat, less than 10 milligrams of sodium and under 200 calories. It is high in complex carbohydrates, which provide the body with a "time release" of energy, rather than just a quick burst. Pasta also contains folic acid (which plays a major role in the body's central nervous system). The NHMRC (Australian National Health & Medical Research Centre) Dietary Guidelines for Healthy Eating recommends 4-9 serves of cereals per day for women (6-12 serves for men) - so what tastier way to eat grains and be healthy than enjoying a bowl of pasta?

Being such a flexible food, you will find at least one pasta dish on most restaurant menus. People with special dietary requirements or concerns can find pasta meals to suit their needs: vegetarian dishes are a standard; coeliacs can now easily find gluten free pastas they can eat without worry, both in supermarkets and many pasta restaurants; dairy intolerant diners can choose tomato or vegetable-based sauces. The healthy factors of pasta depend primarily on the accompanying sauce, so if on a diet, choose the lower fat options ... Just remember the golden rule - everything in moderation!

Dietary concerns aside, how do you choose the "right" pasta with your favourite sauce? Russell Edwards, Owner and Manager of Pasta Place, recommends the following combinations:

"Generally speaking, creamy sauces go well with fettuccini and filled pastas such as ravioli. Meat or tomato based sauces complement spaghetti, while tubes go perfectly with meat and cheese sauces. Shapes (bows or spirals) go well with any sauce!"

"But the choice is ultimately yours - treat yourself to your favourites and enjoy!"

BUILDING A WWWEB OF FOOD...

With Toowoomba's own food resource, OnlineDining.com.au, just over 1 year old, we thought we would share what has been a huge year in growth, and make sure you know of all that's going on, so whether looking for a bargain takeaway, a casual coffee catch-up spot, a romantic night out or new to town and need to find all those hidden treasures, you know where to start looking.

Naturally the original and most comprehensive and convenient place to head for all your dining needs is as close as your own computer, with the entire range of local venues online, featuring webpages and menus from all the greatest venues and all easily searchable according to your individual needs, such as when, what or where as well as fresh ideas and updates to keep you inspired. The site also features a comprehensive Entertainment Guide, Specials Board and much much more.

As not everyone has access to the internet and it's sometimes nice to sit down in the comfort of your favourite lounge chair and rummage through specials and amazing pics of food to really get the taste buds going, venues rallied behind us to introduce a range of print publications, including Toowoomba Food (we trust you are enjoying the read), a high quality free calendar for the regular diners and more organised amongst us, through to Fast Food Finds, the handy and convenient way to keep a great range of discounts handy for that next bargain takeaway.

So, when it comes to food there's one place to turn, well 4 really, and if you have missed a copy of any publications and would like to get your hands on a copy, would like to make sure your venue can be found quickly and easily by the right people or just have some news or ideas for us, drop a line to info@onlinedining.com.au as we would love to hear from you..

Come and enjoy arguably the best weekend breakfast on offer in Toowoomba! Gordy's have the biggest Belgian Waffles this side of the Great Divide! Keep an eye out for Gordy's upcoming cooking classes! and generally, just find any excuse you can to drop in and discover the tantalizing nibbles and tastes that make Gordy's Café Deli a memorable food experience.
